Reflection - Positive thoughts.

One small positive thought in the morning as we go about the daily ritual and rush can make a big difference for the better to our day. It could serve as a kick-start for the brain preparing us psychologically for whatever may come our way. A silent prayer, an affirmation or such can help to crank up our frame of mind to the positive position and provide us with a "I can do" attitude akin to Shakespeares Hamlet "Let come what comes".

Positives can keep things in perspective and make the day-to-day juggling act less pressurised. No matter what challenges the week may trust upon us, we may as well be positive and hassled as negative and hassled. And whatever happens we need to hang on to the two main safety ropes of life - faith and hope. And make sure we bag pack ample supplies of charity and smiles as we get the daily grind underway. Always worth a try.
