Reflection

It's easy to show up for the good times. For the weddings and birthdays and babies. But hold on to the ones who show up when your grief is thick and fresh and unpredictable. When there are awkward and uncomfortable silences and nowhere to hide from sadness. Hold onto the ones who show up at vigils and farewells and funeral homes. Who come to the airport and weep into your suitcase and wave goodbye for as long as they can see you and maybe even longer.

It's easy to show up for the good times. For happy hearts and happy lives and happy careers in happy offices. But hold onto the ones who show up at your door when your've run out of money or run out of hope or run out of time. When your health is failing and your song is fading. Hold onto the ones who brave your breaking.

It's easy to show up for the good times.
