Jesus makes it clear that only those who see him in suffering humanity and who respond with compassion, will enter the kingdom of heaven. It is not enough to obey the law and keep one's hands clean: we are commanded by Jesus in today's Gospel to put our faith into action wherever we see the need. We must be imitators of Jesus in every way, a command which should jolt us out of any trace of complacency we might be harbouring. It is to reach out always to those in need. It is to find the courage within to love those we might think are unlovable, to forgive those we might think are unforgiveable.
